“It was the best of times,
it was the worst of times ”

When Kentucky State University President Raymond Burse used those words from Charles Dickens to describe the state of the university in January, 1989, he must have known what he was talking about.

The 1988-89 school year was one which saw KSU accomplish much. It was indeed the best of times when one considers the completion of the self-study for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, and the good review the SACS visiting team gave the school. University fund-raising reached a new high, and so did alumni fund-raising participation. The football team scored its first road victory in years, and the women's basketball team had a winning season with a 16-12 record, a dramatic improvement over the previous season's 5-22 record. And the $40 million capital improvement project was completed, giving the university a new face for the future.

But it was the worst of times, too, as the university was embroiled in controversy and subjected to the media spotlight. From charges of rape in a dormitory room, to a renegade dean's public accusations against the university administration, to the governor's replacement of the entire Board of Regents, to Raymond Burse's resignation, KSU was often in the public eye, and seemed to be a school with problems.

But — to switch literary allusions — we emerged from the winter of our discontent with a well-respected interim president; with the fiscal and physical condition of the university in better shape than ever; and with the hope that the university will continue to grow and expand its role as the state's unique small liberal arts public university, never forgetting its heritage as the only historically black school in Kentucky.

Going back to Dickens (and paraphrasing his Mme. Defarge): Change is a long time on the road; it is on the road and coming. It never retreats and it never stops. It may not come while we are here, but we shall have helped it.

KSU

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

KSU

August - September

Dr. Mary L. Smith, after 18 years of service at KSU as professor of education and then dean of the College of Applied Sciences, became the new vice president for academic affairs.

Dr. Steven H. Gale (top right), scholar, poet and playwright, became the first person to occupy the new endowed chair in the humanities.

Over 100 students gathered (below) to commemorate the 25th anniversary of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s march on Washington Aug. 28.

In his remarks to the university during the opening convocation, President Burse (right) issued a challenge to the university community to "maintain that fire, that spirit, that dedication and that commitment with which you entered this university."

Students were treated Aug. 18 to a "Back to School Extravaganza" sponsored by SGA. Following a performance by Lexington-based Romeo Delite, students participated in a mini talent show. Winners in the talent show were Vanessa Giddens, Camille Turner, Reggie Allen, Donald Langford, Anita and Annette Gregory, Michelle Johnson, the City Boys and Kevin Parker.

The work of KSU students and faculty from the spring and summer sessions was displayed in a month-long exhibit called "The Art of Watercolor."

Patrick Claiborne and Clem Vinegar were appointed to fill the vacant positions of chief justice and secretary for the SGA Sept. 1.

Five KSU students were arrested and charged with an alleged rape in Young Hall Sept. 11. (All five were later acquitted.) Open visitation was suspended indefinitely pending a university investigation.

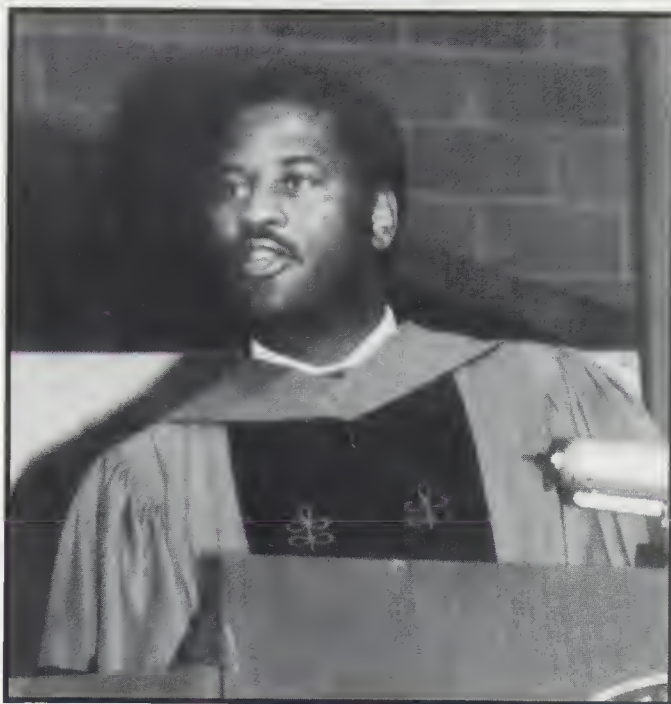

Steven Gale gave his inaugural address to the university Sept. 8. Gale said "we live in an anti-intellectual climate," which we must combat by fostering an inquiring atmosphere at the university.

Traci Hines was crowned Miss Freshman Sept. 7.

The Council on Higher Education formula-funding-review hearing was held at KSU Sept. 29. President Burse told the CHE committee that universities need 100 percent funding to accomplish their goals.

Former Gov. Julian Carroll was the keynote speaker at a Substance Abuse Forum held at KSU Sept. 27. Carroll said, "We cannot achieve quality education as long as drug use continues to interrupt the decorum of the classroom."

A concert by The DeeLe and Johnny Kemp along with Lexington's Romeo Delite on Labor Day weekend entertained a small crowd of about 300 KSU students downtown at the Civic Center.

October - November

The football team muzzled the Knoxville College Bulldogs 31-20 at the Homecoming game.

President Burse reinstated open visitation Oct. 4.

It was reported that enrollment was up, with full-time enrollment setting a new record.

A search of dorm rooms in Young Hall netted some knives, paraphernalia, marijuana seeds and alcohol.

Students and faculty members performed at a Fine Arts convocation Oct. 20.

Controversy and media scrutiny continued to plague KSU, as the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences went public with allegations against the university. Dean Philip Chandler had been suspended by President Burse following an exchange of memos between Chandler and academic vice president Mary Smith.

Chandler was reinstated as dean during a heated Board of Regents meeting Nov. 17. (It was later learned that Chandler had accepted a position at the University of Oklahoma shortly after being suspended.) The board also gave Mary Smith a unanimous vote of support. Burse, saying he was "disgusted and hurt by some of the things that have been said," said he would leave the university after completing several projects.

KSU's ROTC cadets participated in a special Veterans' Day pageant sponsored by the Kentucky Historical Society honoring "Kentucky's Citizen Soldiers."

Students had a chance to show their parents where they lived and worked during KSU's Family Weekend Oct. 28-30.

The first KSU Halloween Monster Mash Bash was held Oct. 29, in the Student Center Ballroom.

Dr. Henry V. Moyana of Zimbabwe told KSU students that southern Africa cannot develop peacefully under the present regime in South Africa. About 100 students attended the speech, sponsored by the School of Public Affairs.

The annual Tech Fest was held Nov. 3-4. Demonstrations of robotics, hydraulics and electronic equipment were offered (below right).

Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity held the Black Cultural Ensemble II Nov. 6. Dr. Patricia Pearson talked about Africa's independent countries, while Dr. Alvin Seales spoke of Africans' contributions to U.S. culture.

SGA, the Pan Hellenic Association and ROTC sponsored food and clothing drives for the needy at Christmas.

December - January

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson replaced KSU's entire Board of Regents in January. New regents are chairperson and former Gov. Louie B. Nunn, former Gov. Edward "Ned" Breathitt, Barbara Curry, Dr. Allan Lansing, Edythe Jones Hayes, William B. Moore, John Johnson, and James E. Lockett. (At right: Breathitt, Curry, Lansing and Hayes)

In his State of the University address, President Burse called the 1988-89 school year "the best of times and the worst of times."

A number of KSU students and administrators took part in the annual commemoration of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday at the St. John AME Church. Students also took part in a protest at the state capitol, because King's birthday is not a state holiday.

The $40 million, six-year capital construction and renovation project neared completion as finishing touches were applied during the "sprucing-up phase."

Dr. Christopher Chuku, associate professor in the School of Business, died in a traffic accident during a visit to his native Nigeria.

Last year's men's basketball most valuable player, Thor Shaffer, was suspended from the basketball team, reportedly for receiving a $99 loan from a coach.

February - March

Charleston Bowles, a senior guard on the Thorobred basketball team, became the 15th Thorobred in history to score 1,000 career points.

A smoldering fire in a utilities tunnel forced the evacuation of the campus Feb. 17.

The third-worst flood in Frankfort history caused the evacuation of dozens of homes and businesses in downtown Frankfort.

The "world's greatest trick shot artist," Paul Gerni, (right), gave a billiards workshops and exhibition in the Student Center game room.

Black History Month activities brought a number of distinguished guests to KSU during February.

Partners 'N' Rhyme, the KSU rap group which won the Media Madness rap show in the fall, opened for the "Don't Believe the Hype" concert featuring Public Enemy Feb. 24.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) accreditation team visited KSU the week of March 20 to validate the self-study submitted by the university.

Ten or more bomb threats disrupted campus life early in the spring semester. The university said it would monitor phone calls if necessary to catch the callers.

Ron Banks' play "The Street Life of Drugs on a College Campus" was presented March 16 (right). Players included George Milliken, Darryl Simmons, Tonjuna Fortson, Vanessa Giddens, Fred Walker, Scott Cheatum and John Sanders.

KSU grad student Byron S. Brown gave a stirring speech about African Americans and the continuing need to work for equality at the Capital City Seventh Day Adventist Church.

The Rev. Hosea Williams of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference told KSU students that "what makes the battle winnable is the fighting spirit of the soldiers." Williams encouraged students to continue the fight to preserve KSU's history.

President Burse announced at a special Board of Regents meeting March 31 that he would step down from the presidency effective April 18.

April - May

William H. Graham (right), a member of KSU's NAIA national championship teams of 1970-'71, returned to his alma mater to be head coach of the men's basketball team.

New officers for the Student Government Association were elected April 18: Corey Bellamy, president; Cynthia Young, vice president; Cecelia Lee Brooks, secretary; and Tshaka Lafayette, chief justice. Marit Williams was elected Miss KSU. Deneia Best and Dawn Morgan were elected first and second attendants.

The Board of Regents named Dr. Mary L. Smith interim president.

The Thorobred News took eight awards at the annual Kentucky Intercollegiate Press Association Conference.

KSU alumnus and practicing dentist Dr. Danny Chacko was the guest speaker at the Lloyd E. Alexander Biology Day. Senior Patricia Cronin (right) received the Lloyd E. Alexander Biology Award, presented by Professor Emeritus Alexander himself. Other award recipients were Richard Carlisle, Leslie Davis, Vicki Tidwell, Jeff Rosenstiel, Tia Twaddell, Bryan Leonard, Jan Bailey, Kandi Branson, Ray Hays and Erica Simpson.

Two KSU music students, Elisa Richey and Stacey Gibbs, were selected as resident advisors at the Governor's School for the Arts. They are the first KSU students to receive the honor.

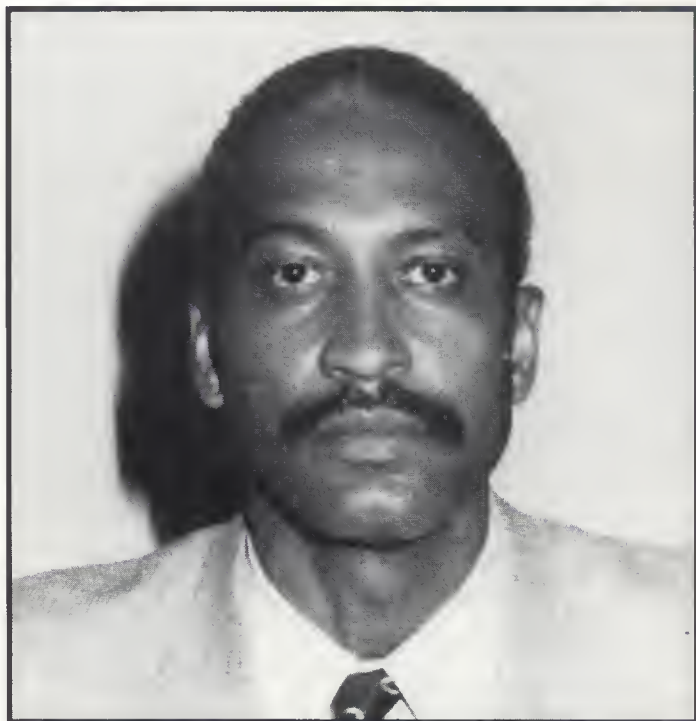

KSU's Small Jazz Ensemble was selected to perform at the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education convention in Washington in April.

Dr. Ronald J. Sheehy, dean of the Honors College at Prairie View (Texas) A&M University, told students at the annual Honors Convocation that they must share an interest in the fundamental moral issues of our time.

KSU honored its student athletes at the April 19 All-Sports Awards Banquet. Forty-seven students were recognized for their prowess.

Patricia Holland, Thorobrette basketball MVP, was named third team all-American by the Women's Black College Basketball Association.

KSU's 100th commencement saw 223 students graduate.

Dr. Christopher Chuku

Students returning to campus after Christmas break were shocked and saddened to learn that Dr. Christopher Chuku, an associate professor in the School of Business, died in a traffic accident Dec. 17 during a visit to his native Nigeria. He was 36.

A memorial scholarship was established in Chuku's honor. His widow, Alfreda, awarded the first Christopher Chuku Memorial Scholarship to Judy Williams at the April 19 Honors Convocation.

Chuku's death was "a tremendous loss to the university," said Dr. Dae Sung Lee, business dean: "He was so popular with students; he had such a nice rapport with students. I cannot describe the loss."

Chuku came to KSU in September, 1987. He held a doctorate in business administration from Nova University in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He is survived by his wife and by three children, Crystal, Princely and Kingsley.

"He was an excellent teacher," said business major Lisa Harris. "He made you learn."

STUDENT LIFE

KSU

The Student Center

The Carl M. Hill Student Center is in many respects the hub of campus life. It houses the Office of Student Life, the Student Government Association offices, the game room, as well as meeting rooms and a lounge (not to mention the grill and the cafeteria). And the bowling alley was reopened this year.

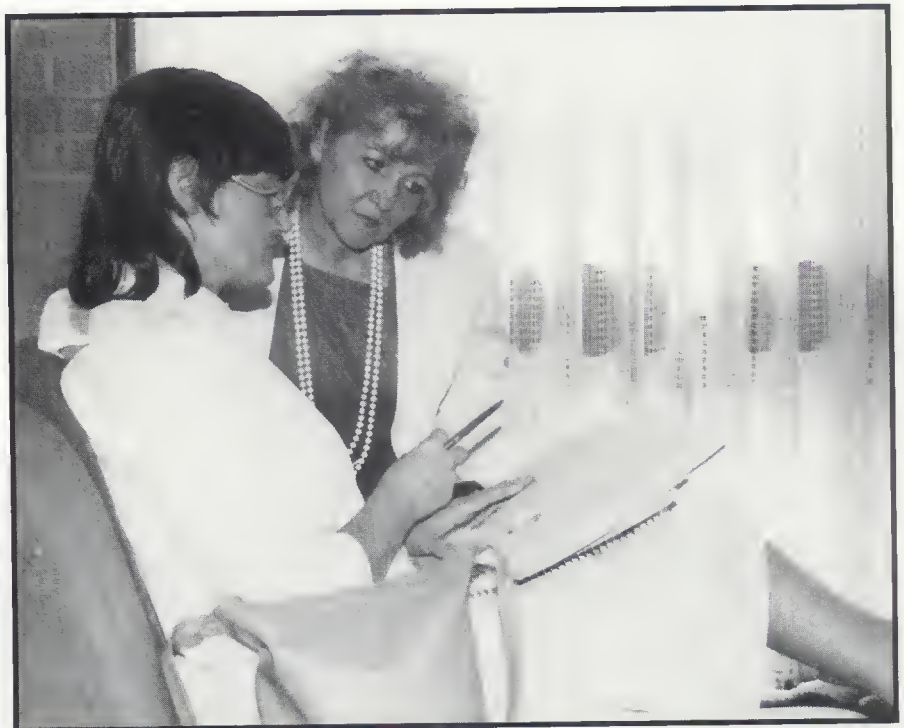

Photos by Reggie McGill

The Student Center lounge is a hangout for students between classes. Students use the lounge for sleeping, catching up on homework, gossiping, smooching, etc. This year the lounge has been used for showing movies on weekends.

Food service aims to please

Morrison's, operators of several cafeteria-style restaurants in Lexington, took over operation of KSU's cafeteria and grill in fall 1988, and students said the new menu was an improvement over previous years. Popular items in the grill included submarine sandwiches, chicken wings with potato strings and thinly-sliced steak and cheese sandwiches. A super salad bar with hot foods, salads, breads and jello was planned for the cafe. Students could also request foods not on the line, like fresh fruit or fried eggs for breakfast.

"We aim to please," said cafe manager Greg Hines.

Christmas breakfast

Christmas breakfast at the cafeteria, hosted by the Office of Student Affairs, is an annual KSU tradition. Stacey Gibbs led members of the concert choir in carols. Santa Claus (a.k.a. Dr. Greenland) had treats for the breakfasters.

Heavy flooding hits Frankfort

Non-stop heavy rains led to Frankfort's third-worst flood ever in mid February. After rising at rates as fast as two feet per hour, the Kentucky River crested early Feb. 17 at nearly 45 feet, 14 feet above flood stage.

A number of KSU students and employees helped residents of the flooded areas evacuate to local shelters.

Fire forces campus evacuation

While Frankfort was under assault by the Kentucky River, a smoldering fire in a utility tunnel prompted the evacuation of the Kentucky State University campus Friday morning, Feb. 17.

Buses took students from campus to the Frankfort Civic Center, where students learned they would not be able to return to campus that day. About 280 students were housed in area motels while Frankfort firemen and university officials assessed the situation.

Students returned to campus on Saturday.

Students make their voices heard

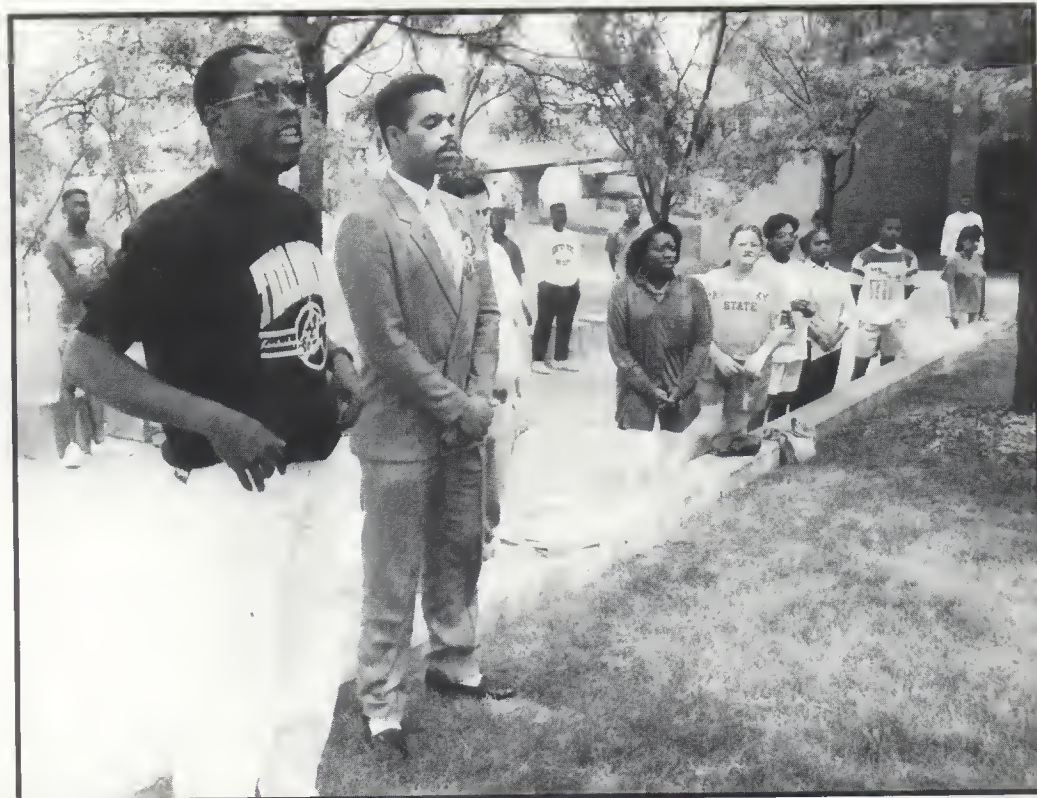

Kentucky State University students were active in 1988-89, staging a number of marches and protests.

More than 100 students gathered outside the cafeteria Aug. 28 (photos, this page) to listen to speakers and singers celebrating the 25th anniversary of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s 1963 march on Washington.

The speakers urged the crowd to continue the work begun by King.

In Washington, some 55,000 people turned out to commemorate the event.

In October, students again gathered outside the cafeteria, this time to protest what they called biased coverage of the Young Hall incident. They expressed concern over the suspension of open visitation that followed the incident, and they criticized the media for reporting bad news about the university.

Photos by Vince Luna

In November, more than 200 students turned out for a Board of Regents meeting to express their support for KSU President Raymond Burse. And they were vocal in protesting the board's reinstatement of controversial Dean Philip Chandler. They said the board should fire him.

Students marched on the state capitol in January (photos, this page) demanding that the governor make Martin Luther King's birthday a state holiday. The crowd swelled to about 200 following a commemorative program in the capitol, after which protestors marched around the building.

"Though the fight for justice and equality which took place in the '60s is a part of our history, we must relive that history," wrote Bryan Leonard in The Throbred News: "We must not take it for granted and give up that fight. Our people were sprayed by hoses, attacked by dogs, clubbed, beaten and even killed. We have to continue our drive to ensure justice. It must be instilled in ourselves, our peers and our children. It's left to us."

Monster Mash Bash draws witches, mummies, goblins

The first Kentucky State University Halloween Monster Mash Bash was held Oct. 29 in the Student Center Ballroom.

Ghosties and ghoulies abounded, and prizes were awarded for the ugliest costume, the prettiest costume, the scariest costume, and the best costumes for a group.

Refreshments including Halloween cookies and hot apple cider were provided. The event was sponsored by Student Life.

Construction in final “sprucing up” phase

Vince Luna

KSU's six-year, $40 million capital construction project entered its final sprucing up phase this spring. Major improvements have included the renovation of four dorms, the construction of the Aquaculture Research Center's animal care facility, installation of new roads, walkways and landscape improvements and the expansion of Blazer Library.

Vince Luna

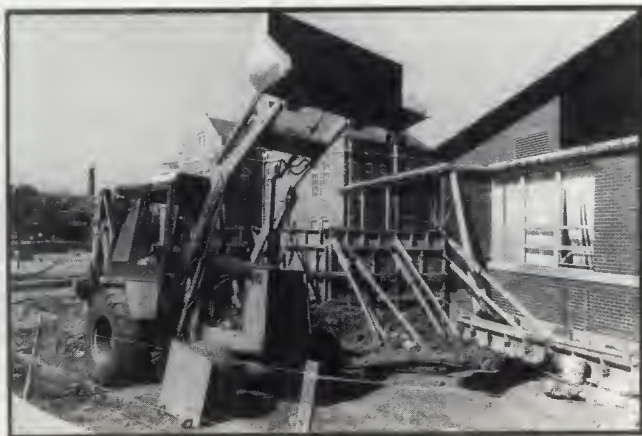

The renovation of the library roughly doubled its size, making space in which to house new books, exhibits, the media center and the music library. Also added was a new study area open 24 hours a day, to give students a quiet place to do homework and cram for exams.

Part of the reconstruction plan called for an improvement in the esthetic look of the university. A pedestrian mall lined with trees linked buildings on the main campus and a new amphitheater was an eye-pleasing addition. New signs were mounted in front of all buildings, along with the installation of a map in front of the entrance at ASB, making finding buildings on campus easier for visitors.

Bell Gymnasium was expanded, making the addition of a new weight room and physiology and kinesiology laboratories possible.

Music news

While academics is naturally the chief reason everyone is here, everyone at KSU recognizes that all work and no play makes Jack or Jill a very dull boy or girl. New Student Life Director Leslie Thomas and her staff, with the help of Ron Banks and others, initiated a number of special events, and revived a number of old favorites. Among the popular entertainment entries were the annual Rent-a-Bod and Green-and-Gold shows. New events included "The Dating Game" and the "Monster Mash Bash" at Halloween.

As always, music was a popular form of entertainment, and students were treated to a number of musical events.

The musical portion of the school year was kicked off Aug. 18 when students were treated to a "Back to School Extravaganza" sponsored by SGA. Following a performance by Lexington-based Romeo Delite, students participated in a mini talent show. Winners in the talent show were Vanessa Giddens, Camille Turner, Reggie Allen, Donald Langford, Anita and Annette Gregory, Michelle Johnson, City Boys and Kevin Parker.

A concert by The DeeLe and Johnny Kemp along with Romeo Delite Labor Day weekend entertained a small crowd of about 300 KSU students at the Civic Center.

The KSU Homecoming concert Oct. 1 featured Guy, Johnny Kemp, Doug E. Fresh and Tony, Toni, Tone.

A rap contest featuring Ex J and Be Fresh from Louisville was held Nov. 9. Winners were MC Spice and QT Ice and their crew Everything Nice (who later changed their name to Partners 'N' Rhyme). The popular KSU rap group went on to enjoy a taste of stardom in February when they opened for the "Don't Believe the Hype" concert featuring Public Enemy.

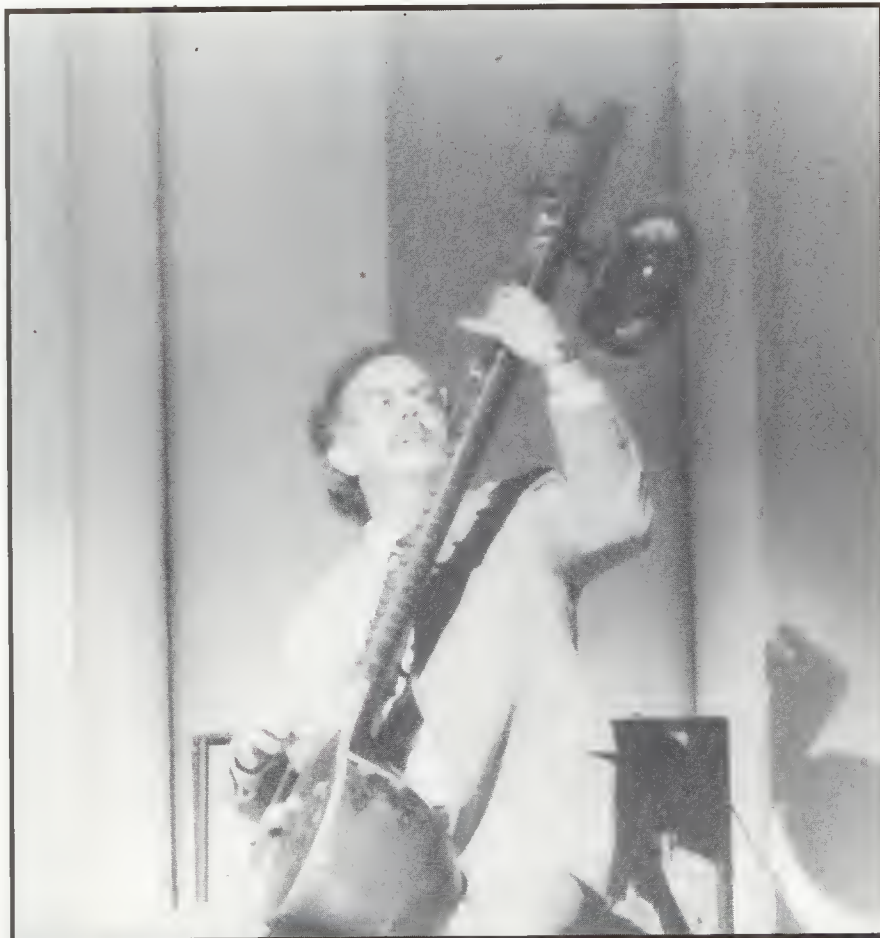

As always, KSU's music students and faculty displayed their talents in a number of productions for the entertainment of the university family. Students and faculty members performed during the Fine Arts Convocation Oct. 20. Highlights of the convocation included baritone Robert Wallace singing lyrics depicting Greek legends with a Greek chorus of Jennifer Brewer, Charity Cuadle, Becky Hatter and Karynne Johnson. KSU speech and theater instructor Dr. Dennis Doyle gave a poetry recitation and Dr. Alan Moore performed his composition "Bombay Funk 88 for Sitar and Synthesizer." Also performing was the KSU Jazz Ensemble.

The KSU Gospel Ensemble continued its tradition of bringing gospel music to new audiences as it toured throughout the year. They gave a stellar performance at the Frankfort celebration of Martin Luther King's birthday, in addition to visiting a host of area churches during the year.

Vince Luna

The KSU concert choir and symphonic band delighted students, faculty and others in a concert dedicated to outgoing President Raymond Burse April 18. Highlights of the concert included a special performance by Stacey Gibbs and Elisa Richey, joined by music director Carl Smith in a touching rendition of "That's What Friends Are For." (Gibbs and Richey were selected to perform as resident advisors to the Governor's School for the Arts — the first KSU students to be so honored.)

Black History Month

Black Enslavement

From far-off Africa across the sea, against our will to a strange country,
they came in droves to our barren shore,
took all at hand and with wine got more.

Then galleys filled from bow to stern
they rammed us in til they themselves scorned the squalor and filth created there through lack of air and bereft of care.

Our hands and feet they bound in chains and mocked and jeered as we in pain began to cry in chant and song for the native land for which we longed.

At night in suppliant prayers to our gods,
our backs bearing witness to their rods, yet we did last the journey through and yearned for life to start anew.

But the journey here was no adventure for as we landed we were indentured servants to the masters.
Slaves we had become against our will.

— Neville N. Morgan

Great challenges make great men. It is not where they stand in times of calm but in times of storm that decides who they are. The Rev. Jesse Jackson is one of those men. In our time no man has stood more for the common good of all men than he. (He is shown here at an Aug., 1987 event in Cincinnati.)

Career Fair

Students had a chance to pass out their resumes, polish their interview skills, and size up their job prospects Oct. 26 when the Office of Counseling and sponsored the annual Career Fair. Representatives from more than 60 companies, armed-service branches, governmental agencies and graduate schools attended the fair to talk to students about their careers.

Teachers' Fair

Representatives from school districts in 16 states visited KSU's Teachers' Fair April 6 and gave students a look at what their systems had to offer. Education students who attended said the fair was very informative.

Williams, Bellamy head winning SGA ticket

Marit Williams (right) and Corey Bellamy (facing page) won the two top spots in the Student Government Association election April 18.

"It is truly an honor to have received the position of Miss Kentucky State University," said Williams, a social work major from Dayton, Ohio.

President-elect Bellamy, a public affairs major from Chicago, said he was looking "onward and upward" for the 1989-90 school year. "Student Government Association will be remembering KSU's past and looking to the future," he said.

Other SGA officers elected were — Cynthia Young, vice president. She is a nursing major from Chicago.

— Faydra Fields, treasurer. She is an English-education major from Tulsa, Okla.

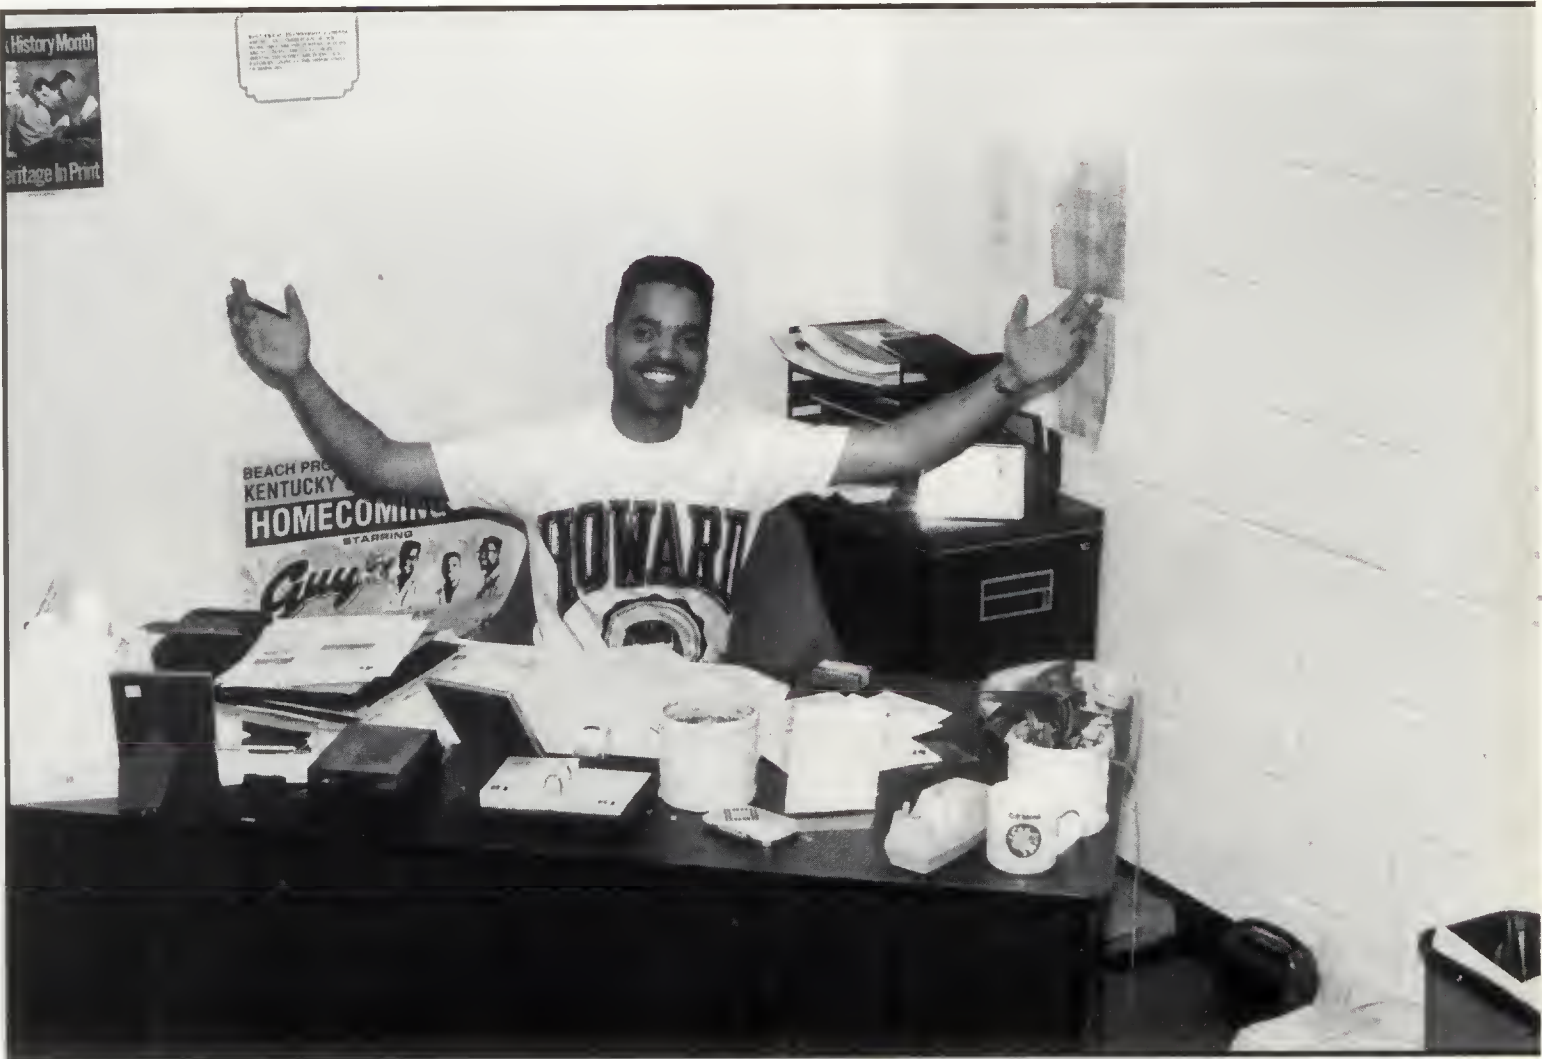

— Tshaka Lafayette, chief justice. He is an English major from Albany, N.Y.

— Cecelia Lee Brookins, secretary. She is a computer science major from Maysville, Ky.

KSU's own Rosenwald School put its tiny tots on the spot in the annual spring presentation in Bradford Hall.

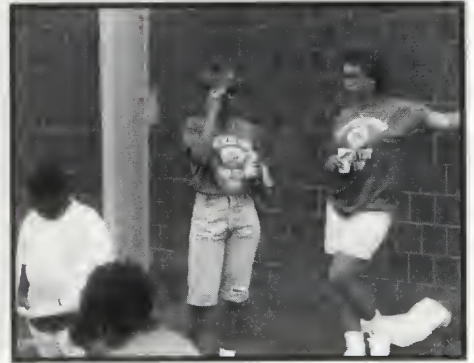

Fun Fest '89

The annual spring Fun Fest, sponsored by the Housing Office, drew the usual throngs. Activities were pleasing to both the very young and the not-so-young, and everyone in between. Highlights included Troy Tindall's command performance in the dunking booth; sack races; and pie- and Whopper-eating contests.

ACADEMICS

Academics

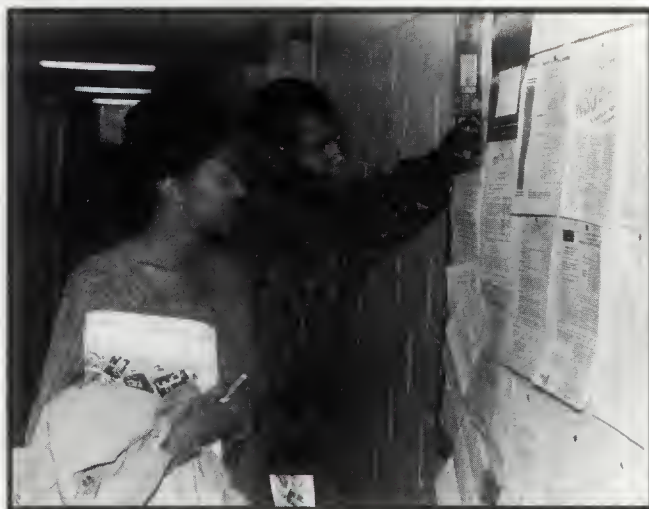

St. Augustine said of his education that as a result of it he could read anything that was written, understand anything that he heard said, and say anything that he thought. This is the goal of a liberal arts education, to liberate one's mind, and as Kentucky's unique, small liberal arts university, KSU strives daily to meet that goal. Kentucky State has a demanding liberal studies curriculum which meets and excels that of other universities in the state. The faculty at KSU have been selected, not only for their outstanding credentials, but for their ability to communicate with students on a personal level.

At KSU, you won't find large lecture halls with 200 students being taught by a first-year graduate student. You will find intimate classes where discussion is encouraged and disagreement respected. Special support services are available to students having trouble. Alumni who've gone on to graduate school believe that they can match degrees with students from any university in the state. But remember, the education you get is only as good as what you put into it. Work at it, and then when you're done you can say what St. Augustine said of his alma mater.

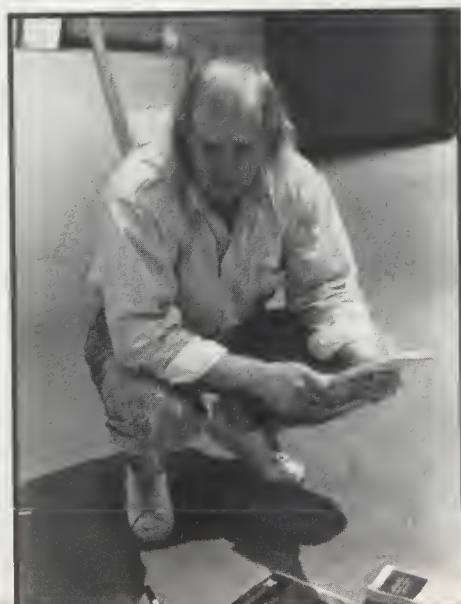

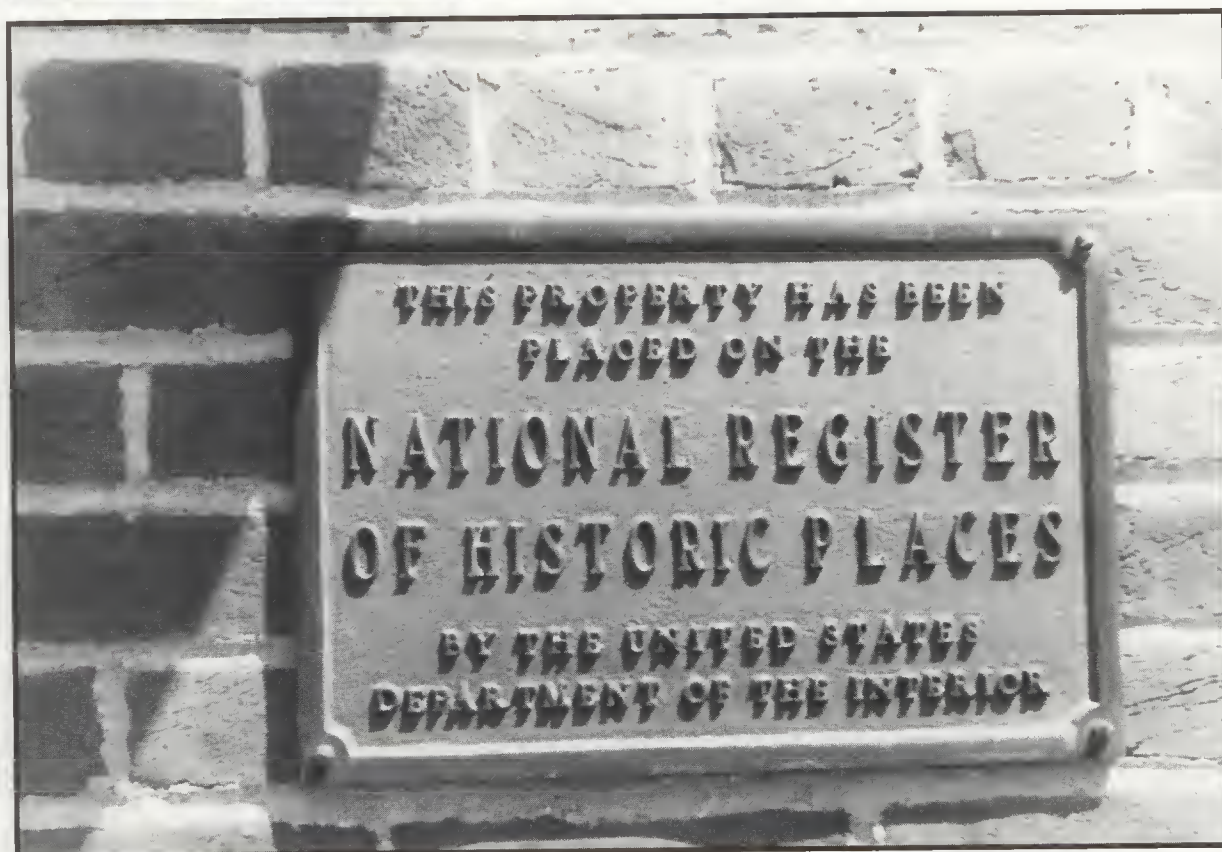

Jackson Hall, an historic landmark, is now home to the art department. John Bator of the art faculty (below) and Valerie Bock, a student from Providence, Ky., installed an art exhibit in the fall.

Banquet honors co-op students — and employers

Kentucky State University's Office of Counseling and Placement honored some outstanding students at its annual awards banquet April 26. Several employers who have been helpful to the office were also honored.

Guest speaker Chester Maull, director of personnel at HCA King's Daughters Hospital, told students that they determine the directions they take in life. He also encouraged them to learn about computers.

Cooperative education is an academic program incorporating alternating periods of part-time or full-time employment and classroom study. About 150 students work in the cooperative education program.

Cooperative Education Student of the Year was John Bond, a senior with a 4.0 GPA. Another top performer was James Moxley. The Graduate School Award was presented to Leslie Davis.

Convocation honors KSU's finest students

"There is satisfaction in knowing one's mind and acting in light of one's convictions," said Dr. Ronald J. Sheehy, dean of the Honors College at Prairie View (Texas) A&M University, at the annual Honors Convocation. He said students must share an interest in the fundamental moral issues of our time.

Sheehy added that everyone has the spirit to bolster his or her convictions. "I can't precisely define it for you, but I know beyond a shadow of a doubt that it lives within each of us," he explained. "Perhaps it makes us shout, or cry out . . . it beckons you to rise above fear, to rise above circumstance, to dream, to think of greatness."

More than 100 KSU students received awards and recognition for their accomplishments. Senior Thomas Moore received the President's Award for being the graduating senior with the highest grade-point average. SGA President Anthony Tichenor received the Mayor's Citizenship Award. Valerie Bock was given the Freshman Award.

100th commencement, 223 graduates

At the State Normal School for Colored Persons' first commencement in 1890, five young blacks received teacher's certificates qualifying them to teach in segregated schools.

On May 14, 1989, 223 students — of many races and cultures — received degrees in a variety of fields from what is now Kentucky State University.

Commencement speaker Lt. Gov. Brereton Jones noted that KSU has gone through many changes and is poised for an important future.

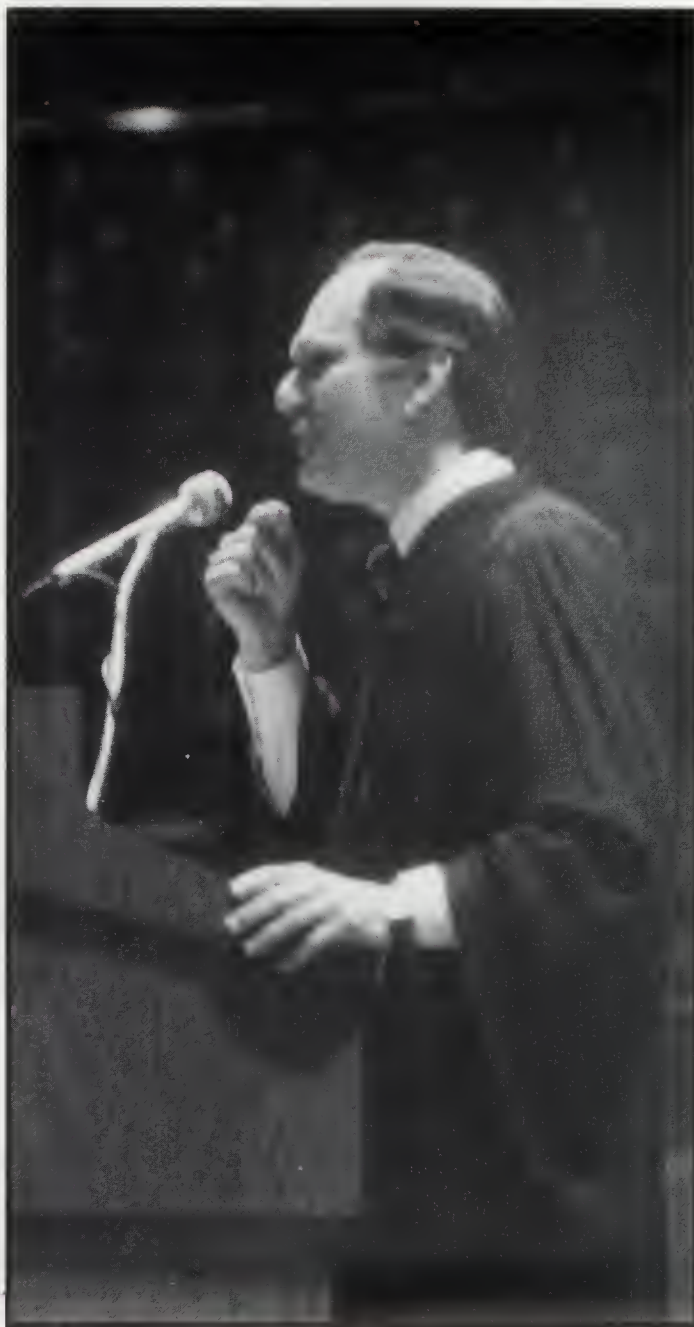

"Who among you has the courage to see that any person in this state, no matter what color, what age, what economic circumstances, has the opportunity to get an education that is at least equal to and competitive with educational opportunities anywhere in the nation?" Jones challenged the graduates.

The university awarded 125 bachelor's degrees, as well as 38 master of public affairs degrees and 60 associate's degrees.

Honorary doctor of humane letters degrees were conferred on former KSU president Raymond M. Burse; Jones; and Dr. Leonard A. Slade, former arts and sciences dean.

Dr. Dae Sung Lee, dean of the School of Business, was recognized as the university's distinguished professor for 1989.

The Thorobred News wins awards

Thorobred News editor Tracy Whirls tied for top honors as she was named one of two Outstanding Journalists for Division B schools at the annual Kentucky Intercollegiate Press Association conference at Northern Kentucky University in April.

Whirls and several other Thorobred News staff members also won awards in specific Division B categories.

Thorobred News staffers swept the news-story category: Whirls won first place, Derrick Fishback second place, and Reggie McGill third place.

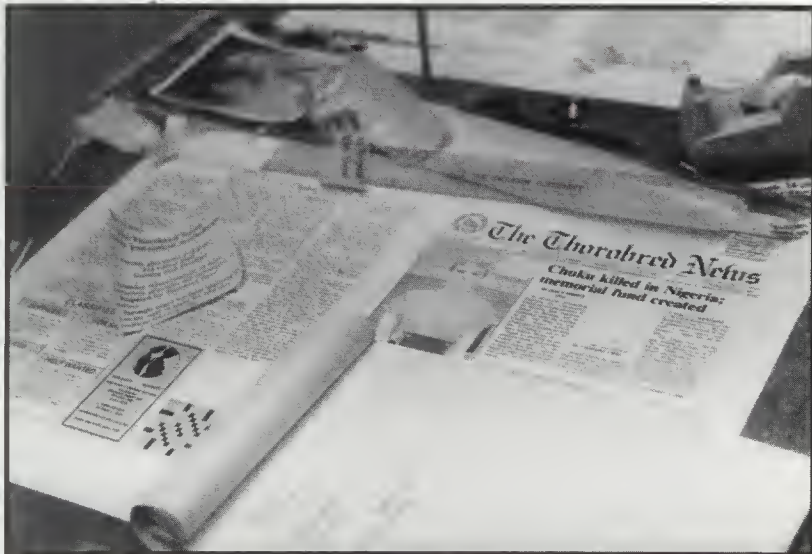

Whirls also took first-place honors in the investigative reporting and continuing news categories.

Vince Luna won a third-place award for news photography; Matt Miller received an honorable mention in the sports feature category; and Whirls received an honorable mention in the personality profile category.

The 1988 Thorobred football team got in shape during the blazing hot pre-season. They worked hard during the practice season, coming out with a winning attitude and a mighty fighting Thorobred spirit.

Thorobreds post
a season filled with excitement and wins

The Kentucky State University Thorobreds had their best season in several years. The Thorobreds won three of four home games, part of a schedule that included seven away games.

The highlights of the season were a Homecoming win over Knoxville College and a "Senior Day" win over Morehouse College. The Thorobreds won on the road for the first time in five years at Glenville State University in West Virginia.

Coach William Head is starting to build a respectable program at Kentucky State. The Thorobreds have several lettermen returning for the 1989 season and should only get better and improve on the 1988 season's 4-7 record.

Women's Basketball

Wow! What a season!

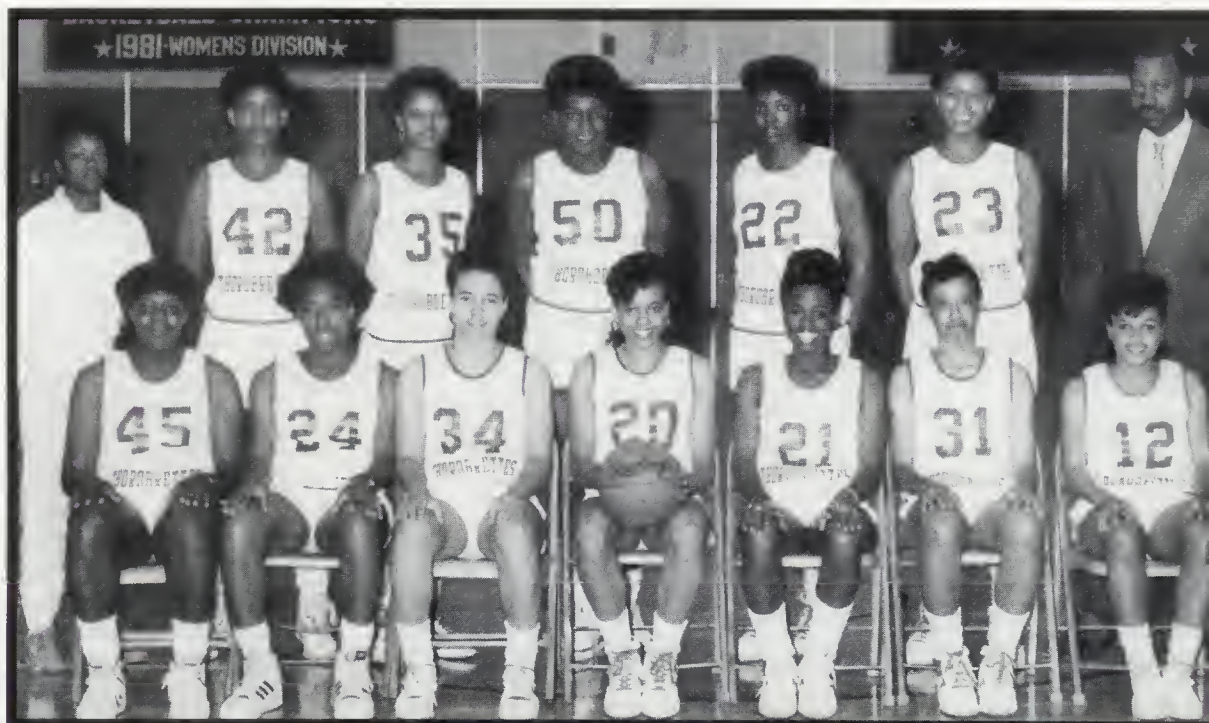

The Kentucky State Thorobrettes had many new faces and were only expected to be mediocre at best in 1988-89. But instead the T-Brettes shocked everyone and played some of the best basketball in recent years at KSU.

The T-Brettes won an astounding 16 games and suffered 12 losses, which was far better than anyone had anticipated. They lost only two players after December, and neither was a starter. They lost several close games and should have won more games than they actually did.

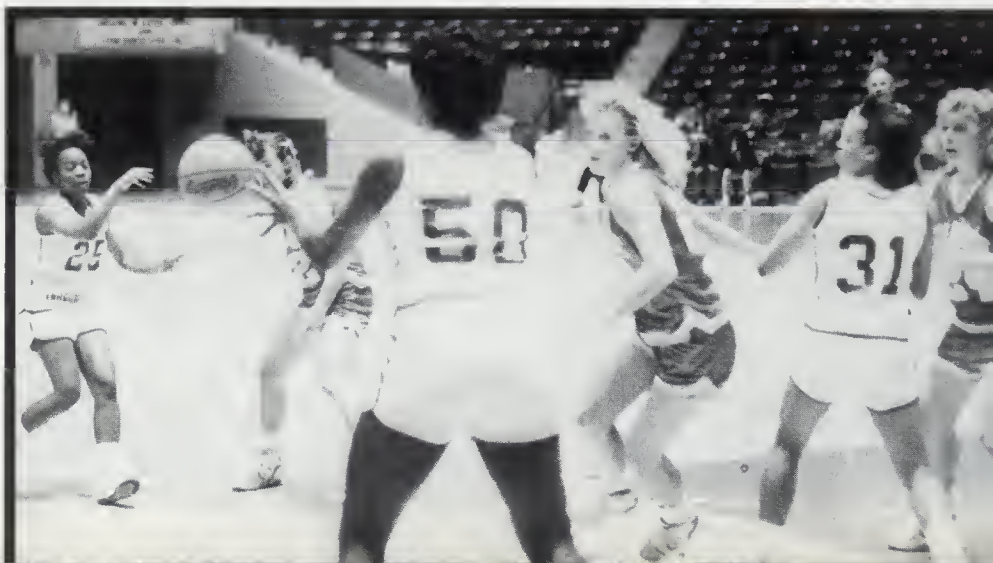

This gives second-year coach Oscar Downs plenty to build on for next year, because the only player lost was senior point guard Pat Holland. Holland gained All-American-candidate honors and played a big role in the successful season.

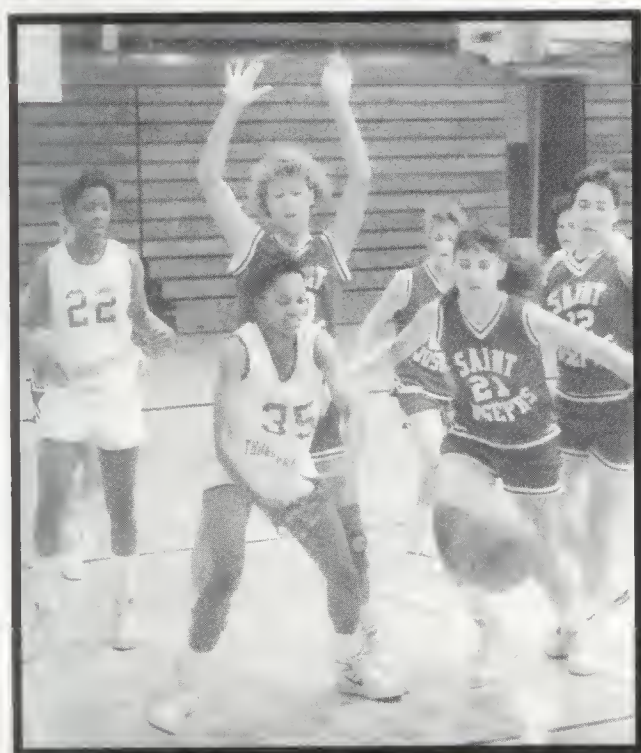

The future looks bright for the Thorobrettes.

The season that wasn't

The Kentucky State Thorobreds were returning several lettermen and welcoming some red-shirt players who sat out the 1987-88 campaign. Expectations were high for an improvement over that season's 16-12 record. But midway through the season — following a 4-2 start — the T-breds fell on hard times as players were lost to academic difficulties or NCAA problems. The team lost its top two scorers, as well as its leading rebounders.

The fact that head coach Paul Peck resigned before the start of the season and was replaced by assistant coach Al Gordon didn't help the T-Breds, either. And things only got worse as the season went on. After December, the season was totally lost and the T-Breds proceeded to lose 20 straight games, finishing with the worst record since the institution became a university. They were 4-24 and the only bright spot of the season was Charleston Bowles' performance (see below). In addition to joining the 1,000-point elite, Bowles was team MVP and led the team in scoring.

The T-Breds have some lettermen returning for the 1989-90 campaign, but with the uncertainty about a new head coach and few new recruits, the program has gone backwards and faces a rebuilding stage in 1989-90.

Bowles joins 1,000-point club

Charleston "Bubby" Bowles became only the 15th player in Kentucky State University history to score over 1,000 points in his career. The big moment came in Bell Gymnasium Jan. 23.

Bowles, a 6-foot-2-inch senior guard from Indianapolis, Ind. and a graduate of Howe High School, said he didn't really feel the effects of his accomplishment until after he thought about the company he had joined and what an achievement he had reached.

Charleston's brother Fred, who also played and starred at Kentucky State, was the last player to score 1,000 points. "Bubby" said that even though it was not a competitive thing between the two brothers, it "makes the feeling that much sweeter" to know that they will go down in history here as the 14th and 15th 1,000-point scorers.

Bowles, a marketing major with a minor in economics, said that his academic endeavors are just as important as his athletic achievements.

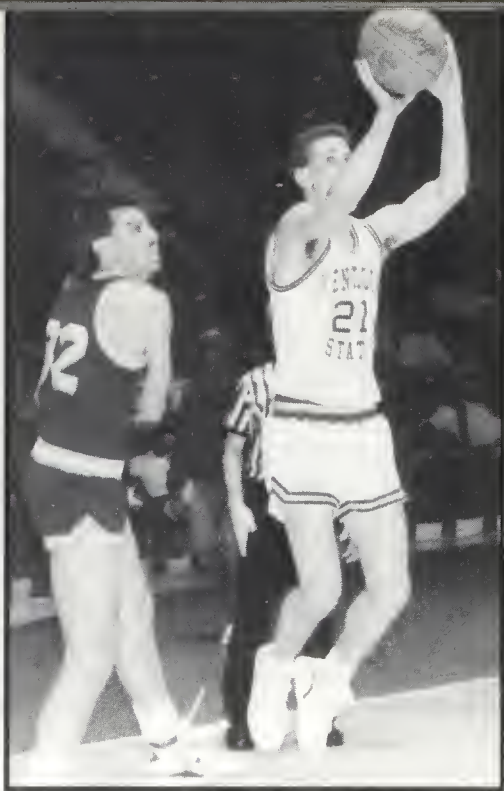

Isadore Rich, KSU athletic academic advisor, said that Charleston is a fine student who has all the ability and tools to be successful in the world of work and in life.

It is clear that Charleston has been a leader by example during his years at KSU.

Inexperience, lack of depth costly

The KSU volleyball Thorobrettes were young and inexperienced in many ways, and coach Ron Braden could only field a seven-player rotation. The T-Brettes played their hearts out and finished 17-20 on the season. Braden says it was an uphill struggle from the beginning of the season with star Jackie Bone's ineligibility and a slow 2-8 start. When the T-Brettes were at full strength, Braden says, he was very happy. While happy with the progress the team made, Braden says that for next season he needs more backcourt players and more quality players to add depth to the team. The biggest need will be for a setter to replace senior captain Trish Cronin. All in all, the rebuilding process continues.

Softball "volunteer army" tries hard

Although the Thorobrette softball team only won three games (and lost 22), coach Oscar Downs said the team "did as well as expected." The team was a "volunteer army," Downs said. "They played well for a team that's put together from year to year — they did real well."

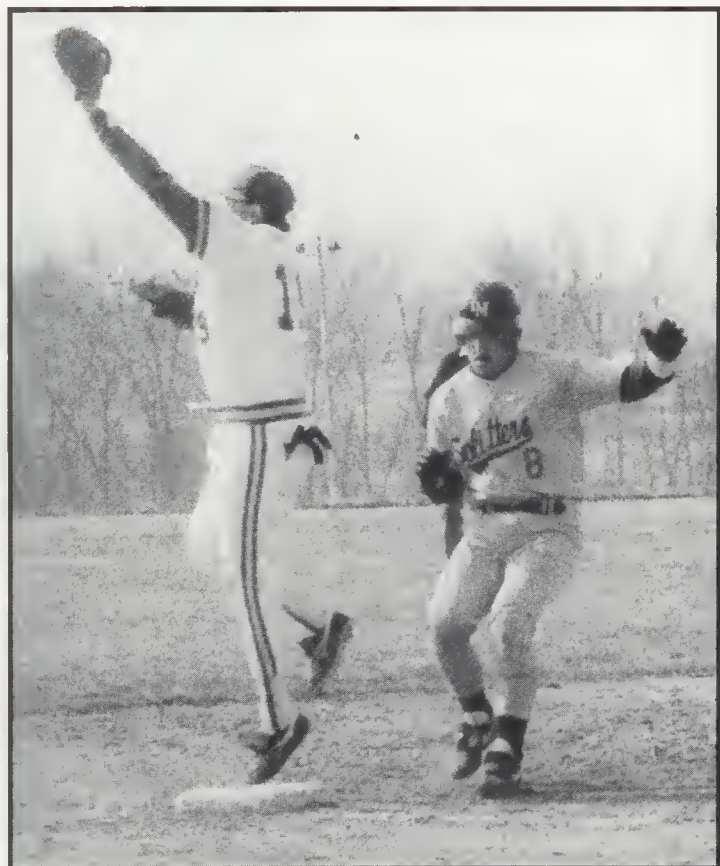

Downs had praise for his top players. He said Tanya Golden was the team's best hitter and fielder. Trish Cronin was the best pitcher, he said, and Melanie Thomas was the best freshman player. Thomas also had the most home runs, he said.

"Next year we hope to do much better," Downs said. "We're definitely up-grading."

Competitive schedule holds baseball team back

"Statistically, we did real well," according to KSU baseball coach Ron Braden: "We played better than last year. The only difference is we played a more competitive schedule." Braden's team ended the season with a 14-23 record.

"We gained a lot of experience," said Braden, "which will help us when we get into conference play."

Chuck Etherington took the pitching award. "He did an outstanding job as pitcher and at the plate," Braden said. Catcher Roy Lakes received the batting award for the second year in a row (with a batting average of .372). Other top players, Braden said, were Lucius Landing, Kevin Lindsay (a freshman and the team's winningest pitcher), and Stan Shelby (who, with a .358 average, was second only to Lakes at the plate).

Track squad does well

The KSU track team had a "fairly good" season, according to track coach David Boyd. The team won five dual and five triangle meets, against such schools as Morehouse, Clark, Fort Valley, Tuskegee and Albany.

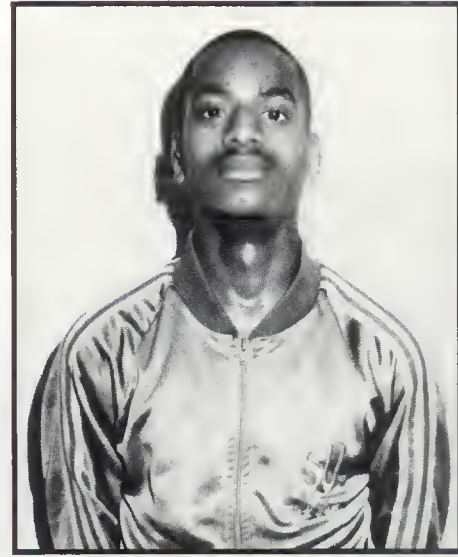

"We had a real good two-mile relay," Boyd said. The relay squad included Teresa Early, Kwanini Riddick, Beverly Smith and Lafonda Stallworth.

Curtis Ripy was the nucleus of the men's track team, Boyd said.

With his entire team returning for 1989-90, Boyd has high expectations.

KSU fields 1st golf team

The golf season was "strictly a beginning," said coach William Head. "We started with beginning golfers and had the first-ever KSU golf team."

The team participated in several tournaments, Head said, adding, "We were representative."

Freshman Van Mace was the team "medalist," with the lowest scores in all of its matches.

Homecoming 1988

The NAACP Homecoming float was a colorful part of outdoor activities.

Hot air balloon rides gave a lift to the pep rally.

Coronation insiders in a moment to remember.

The 1948 championship football team watched us beat Knoxville.

KSU cheerleaders, the spice of the game.

The champs at their best (KSU 31, Knoxville 20).

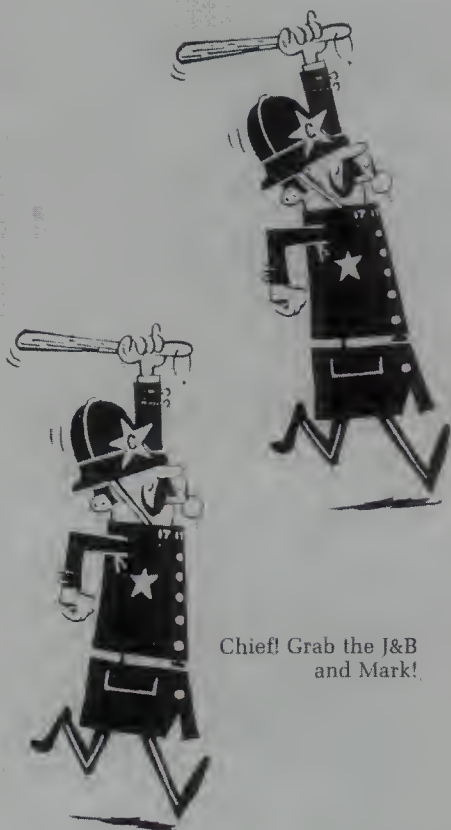

Alumni — now in various walks of life — return for Homecoming.

Hey! You're in violation of Thoro-bred rules! Now hand over that fifth of vodka!

Chief! Grab the J&B and Mark!

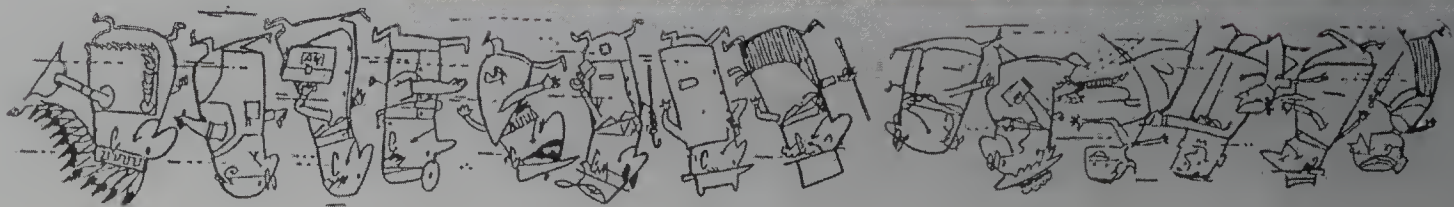

The Alumni Association — KSV's finest

As usual, Homecoming welcomed nearly 2,000 alumni. KSV's alumni began celebrating early. The prelude was a summer weekend extravaganza in Indianapolis, Ind. This formal social occasion facilitated unified efforts for academic excellence in promoting the continued recruitment of fine students.

In addition, the Alumni Association donated gifts, particularly scholarship funds, as tokens of appreciation for our recruits and Alma Mater.

During Homecoming week, President Burse was the honorary host of a reunion banquet for the 1948 championship football team, also sponsored by "KSV's finest." What an enhancement to Kentucky State University — its alumni!

Herman Robinson of Alumni Affairs is optimistic that a variety of creative functions will be a part of future planning.

The crowning of our queen

Every young woman's most treasured and most dreamed-about aspiration . . . a dream . . . so close to the heart. A hopeful opportunity to become the most respected, and acknowledged as an absolute, achiever of sheer excellence — being crowned Miss Kentucky State University.

The honorable Miss Leslie Jean Davis, Miss Kentucky State University, experienced the emotions of this joyous reality during our 1988 coronation.

The charming Miss Davis, a studious biology major, adored for her confident behavior, electrified the Bradford Hall auditorium poised with the elegance of pure beauty coupled with a wealth of scholastic achieve-

The splendor of Miss Davis' attitude during the ceremony reflects the sincerity of her motto that "With a strong mind, nothing is impossible."

Traci Charise Hodge First Attendant

Miss Traci Charise Hodge is the daughter of Mr. Willie Hodge and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williams. Traci is the second youngest of seven children.

Traci is a senior, majoring in Public Administration. She is a native of Flint, Mich.

Traci has participated in several clubs and organizations at KSU, including the Sigma Sweethearts Club; Miss Gospel Ensemble; secretary of Gospel Ensemble; NAACP; and the Public Affairs Student Association.

Teressa Annette McAdoo Second Attendant

Teressa Annette McAdoo is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McAdoo of Cincinnati, Ohio. She has an older sister, Mrs. Marcia Mitchell.

She has served as a senator for the Student Government Association and has been a member of the NAACP, the Gospel Ensemble, and Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.

Teressa is majoring in early elementary education. She plans to pursue a master's at Xavier University.

Inside observers at the coronation

Craig Johnson (right), a junior from Toledo, Ohio, seasoned the occasion for our favorite lady with songs such as "You and I" and "Always and Forever."

I really admire Miss KSU ... Next year will be mine ... I am happy for Leslie ... This will be over soon ... She thinks she's all that ... I do envy her ...

Style = $$$

Just about everyone here at KSU has his or her own unique style. However, for the fall and spring of the 1988-89 school year, the style was simply expensive.

The trends for both men and women held more of the same laid-back taste.

Acid-and stone-washed jeans of any kind were worn by many students, as was leather.

Leather or suede of all shapes and colors ranged from long to short coats, riding boots, pants, dresses and hats. Anything goes.

Suits were tailored with a more conservative look. Designer fashions of the most expensive kind dominated the campus scene. Students paid from $35 to $200 (maybe more) for designer goods that bore that signatures of Louis Vuitton, Gucci, MCM, Nike, British Knights, Adidas and Troop — just to name a few.

Men's slacks were the same as last year — baggy and straight legs. However, some women have been seen in flare-legged pants.

Sweaters of all textures, shades and cuts were popular.

“Look” means more than clothes

Clothes are not the only things to make a fashion statement. Hairstyles, shoes and accessories enhance a “look.” For men, high and low box tops were worn along with low cuts with waves. There were a few heads on campus that sported dramatic cuts and processes.

Women on the scene sported natural, relaxed styles. Extensions were in demand, ranging from straight to braids, as well as curls or waves which left many “crimp crazy.”

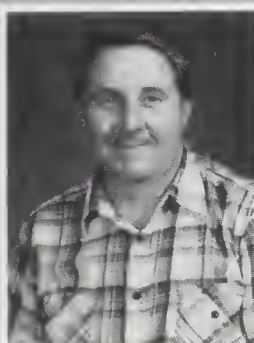

KSU

Burse era comes to an end

"There are few chances in life a person gets to make a meaningful contribution to something," said Raymond M. Burse, accepting the presidency of Kentucky State University in 1982.

During Burse's seven-year tenure, KSU changed dramatically. Burse, at 32 the youngest president in the university's history, arrived at a campus in crisis. Buildings were in disrepair; finances were in a shambles. There was talk of closing the school or making it a community college.

The legislature gave KSU a new mission — to become the state's "unique small public liberal arts university" — and Burse led the drive for change. He also oversaw $40 million in capital construction which changed the university's face remarkably.

The changes were more than cosmetic. Burse oversaw the development of the school's liberal arts programs, including the creation of both the Whitney M. Young, Jr. College of Leadership Studies and the Integrative Studies Program.

While even his critics recognized his accomplishments, controversy dogged Burse. His management style, which some called abrasive, brought him under fire from faculty and media alike. He was blamed for the rate of turnover of faculty and senior administrators during his tenure. He was also criticized by state black leaders for too aggressively implementing the state desegregation plan and losing a number of black faculty.

In April 1988, Burse resigned, saying he was tired and burnt out. He said later that regents, colleagues and students had persuaded him to stay. In October he became embroiled in a controversy over what then-Dean Philip Chandler called institutionalized racism. Burse announced after that that he would soon leave KSU.

In January, 1989, Gov. Wallace Wilkinson replaced the entire Board of Regents; and at a board meeting in March it was decided that Burse would step down effective April 18.

"I have had a love affair with the students of this university," said Burse. "They have been my pride and joy. I will lose that interaction with students, but it's time to move on."

Mary Smith takes the reins

When Dr. Mary L. Smith began the 1988-89 school year as a newly-appointed vice president for academic affairs, she had no idea she would end the year in the president's office. She said that while her appointment as interim president surprised her, it was really a continuation of the work she was doing as vice president.

"It's time consuming, interesting and exhausting, and difficult to sum up in a few words," Smith said of her new duties.

While the appointment may have surprised her, she moved quickly to imprint her own style on the office of the president. Faculty and staff report a more relaxed atmosphere, which Smith says she hopes will improve productivity.

"Not being a stranger to the institution has helped," she said. "Having been in the trenches I understand what the needs are better perhaps than a stranger would coming in." She added that she has received a lot of support from the university community.

Smith, an 18-year veteran at KSU, can be said to have worked her way up through the ranks. She began as a faculty member in the education department in 1974; was appointed dean of the College at Applied Sciences in 1983; and was promoted to academic affairs vice president last fall.

On the occasion of her appointment to that office, Smith told The Thoroughbred News what she felt the university's goal should be, and her prediction for the university's future:

"We need to work to instill in students the desire to learn, and we need to conserve Kentucky State's heritage while at the same time continuing to grow. I think we're in good shape," she said.

Student Affairs

Mrs. Betty Gibson, acting vice president for student affairs (and a KSU alumna), is known as the woman to see when you're in trouble.

In addition to helping students in trouble and handling discipline cases, Mrs. Gibson oversees all non-academic aspects of student life, from financial aid to student publications.

"Have respect for yourself and others and for the rules of any institution of which you're a part," she says, adding that she likes to see students even when they're not in trouble.

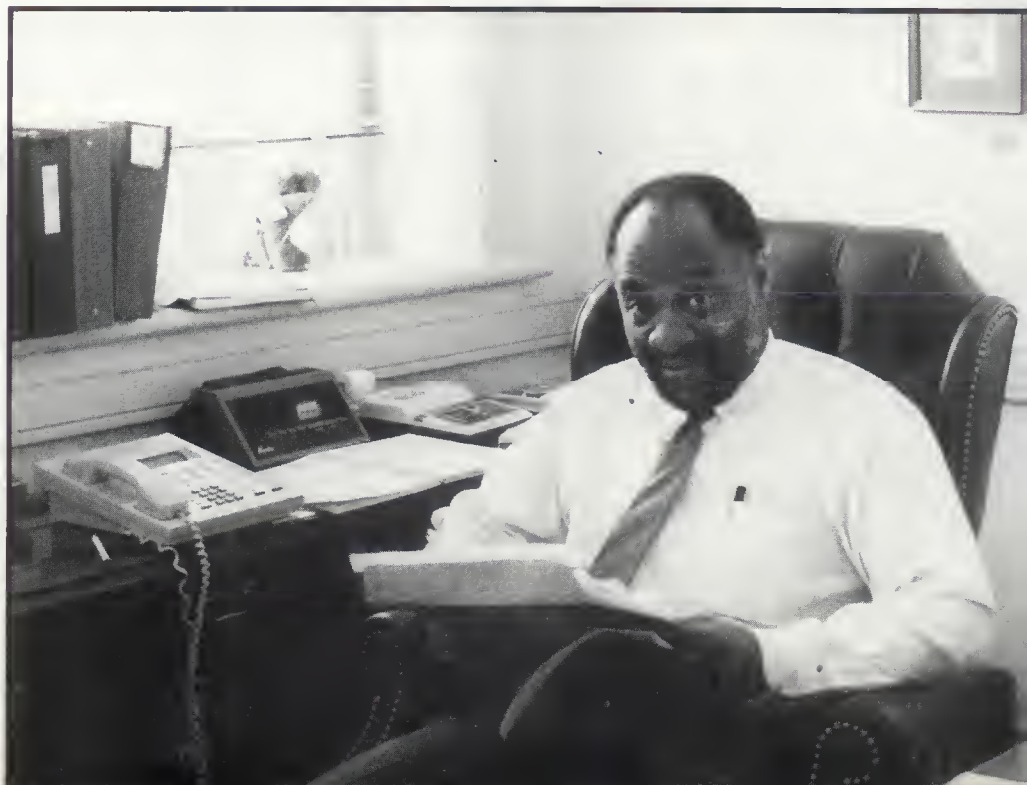

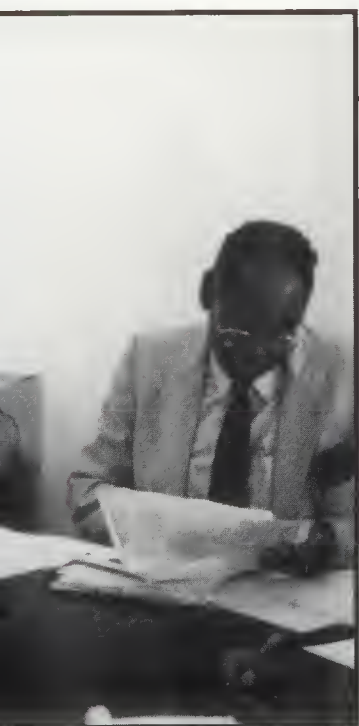

University Relations

Vice President for University Relations Charles Lambert has worn many hats in his seven years at KSU. His current duties include overseeing Alumni Affairs, fund raising, athletics, Public Information and Graphics.

A KSU alumnus, Lambert said he returned to work here because "I care about the institution."

Asked for advice to give students, Lambert said, "Be mindful of the reason you're all here."

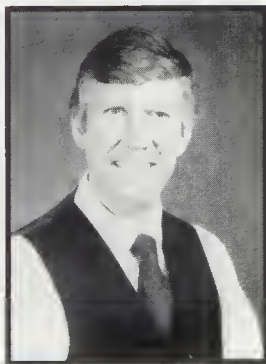

Business Affairs

As acting vice president for business affairs, KSU alumnus Carson Smith (left) is responsible for overseeing all physical and financial operations of the university. He has worked here since 1984, and assumed his current position after Bob Luhmann (below) resigned in midyear.

"Nothing is too good for my alma mater," Smith said. He called the opportunity to work at KSU the chance of a lifetime.

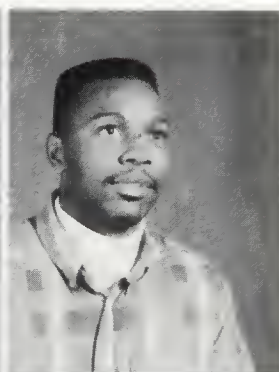

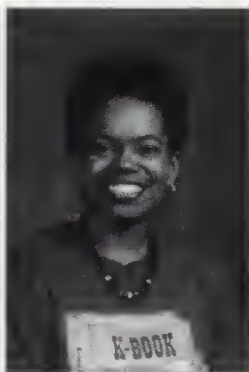

"I'll never accomplish what I've accomplished here anywhere else," said Smith. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."
